INTRODUCTION

The University is committed to protecting the privacy of all members of the University community. The University will act responsibly to collect, manage, use and disclose personal information in accordance with prevailing community standards of best practice, the Northern Territory Information Act 2002 and any other privacy-related legislation.

Staff members, students, researchers, contractors and any other third party who collects, manages or uses personal information on behalf of the University have an obligation, in their day to day practices, to adhere to and implement the privacy principles and practices established by legislation and given detailed expression in this Policy.

STATEMENT OF AUTHORITY

The authority behind this policy is the Charles Darwin University Act 2003 (NT) part 3, section 15.

INTENT

This document provides the framework for the University’s implementation of the Information Privacy Principles (IPPs) to ensure compliance in the management of personal information.

RELEVANT DEFINITIONS

POLICY

Collection of Personal or Other Information

The University will only collect personal information that is necessary for, or directly related to the University's functions or activities in a lawful, fair and not unreasonably intrusive way. Personal information that the University collects from staff members, students, prospective and past students, benefactors, research participants and external contractors may include, but is not limited to:

- Names and other related contact details;
- Student Identification Numbers and official University email addresses;
- Emergency contacts;
- Photographic identification;
- Academic qualifications, history and progress;
- Information relating to entitlements to related educational government payments or support such as HECS or FEE HELP;
- Complaints or misconduct details or information;
- If engaging any health service, information necessary to deliver that service, for example, medical history; and
- Any other related personal information required for the effective management of the University.
The University may collect, use, and exchange personal information for the following reasons:

- To establish an individual's identity for the purposes of admission to a course of study;
- To establish an individual's identity for the purposes of employment;
- To establish an individual's identity for the purposes of access to Information and Communication Technology (ICT) systems;
- To manage the relationship with an individual;
- To manage the University's risks such as assisting to identify and investigate illegal activities;
- To identify and inform an individual about courses, products and services that the University thinks may be of interest to a particular individual;
- To contact an individual in the case of an incident or emergency; and
- From time to time, for other necessary purposes as they arise.

The University will ensure that when collecting personal and/or sensitive information, the individual will be informed as to:

- The purpose for which the information is collected;
- Whether all fields of a form are compulsory or some are optional;
- How the information is usually used and to whom it is usually disclosed;
- That the University's Information Privacy Policy is accessible on the University website;
- The fact that an individual has the right to gain access to his or her personal information held by the University;
- The email address for information privacy enquiries – privacy@cdu.edu.au;
- Any law that requires the particular information to be collected, for example, Tax File Numbers; and
- Any consequences for the individual if all or part of the personal information requested is not provided;

If an individual chooses not to provide information as requested, the University may not be able to provide services to that individual.

Collection from another Source

The University may collect personal information about an individual from another source when:

- The individual consents to the collection from someone else;
- The University is required or authorised by, or under, an Australian law, or a court / tribunal order, to collect the information from someone else; or
- It is unreasonable and impracticable to get the information directly from the individual.

The University may also collect personal information when an individual accesses the University's website or mobile applications. Information collected may include location or activity including IP address, telephone or mobile phone number and whether third party sites have been accessed. Some of the website information is collected using Cookies.
Use and Disclosure of Collected Information

The University will not use or disclose personal information about an individual other than for the purpose stated at the time of the collection or where it would reasonably be expected that the University would do so:

- Without the individual’s written consent;
- A court or similar body orders the information be released; or
- A law enforcement agency is requiring information and certain tests are met.

Emergency Situations

The University may disclose personal information for a secondary purpose if it reasonably believes that the use or disclosure is necessary to lessen or prevent:

- A serious and imminent threat to an individual's or another individual's life, health, safety or welfare; or
- A serious or imminent threat of harm to, or exploitation of, a child; or
- A serious threat to public health, public safety; and
- The information is used or disclosed in accordance with the NT Information Act 2002.

Direct Marketing

The University may use or disclose personal information (other than sensitive information) about an individual for the purpose of direct marketing if:

- The University collected the information from the individual; and
- The individual would reasonably expect the University to use or disclose the information for that purpose; and
- The University provides an opportunity by which the individual may easily request not to receive direct marketing communications from the University and the individual has not made such a request to the University.

The University may not use or disclose sensitive information about an individual for the purpose of direct marketing unless the individual has consented to the use or disclosure of the information for that purpose.

Overseas Disclosures

Generally the University will use systems and customer service teams located within Australia, however, some University Information and Communication Technology (ICT) systems use cloud computing services that are hosted in countries other than Australia.

Before the University discloses personal information about an individual to a third party overseas the University will take such steps as are reasonable in the circumstances to ensure that the overseas recipient will protect privacy under standards similar to the Northern Territory Information Privacy Principles.

For research students whose supervisor or examiner is located in a country other than Australia, personal information may be sent electronically or through the mail to that individual in that country.

Third Party Disclosure

Where legally authorised or required to do so the University may share personal information collected with third parties, such as:
• Those to whom the University outsources certain functions;
• Commonwealth, State and Territory Governments agencies and regulators;
• Foreign governments, as may be applicable to international students;
• Law enforcement agencies and regulators;
• Entities established to help identify illegal activities and prevent fraud;
• Employers or former employers;
• Auditors;
• Protection providers, insurers and re-insurers;
• Superannuation companies;
• Debt collection agencies; and
• Recruitment agents.

The University will ensure that any contracts with third parties where personal information may be transferred will contain privacy clauses requiring compliance with this Policy.

Management
The University will protect and safeguard all personal information collected to protect against misuse, loss, unauthorised access, modification or disclosure by:

• Implementing industry standards for the security and protection of personal information; and
• Storing information in either electronic and/or hard copy forms with access restricted to authorised personnel only.

Security, integrity and accuracy of information is governed by the University’s Information and Communication Technologies Security Policy and Records Management Policy and related procedures.

The University will in certain situations remove or alter information that identifies an individual or is reasonably likely to do so, for example, research or surveys that may contain address information that could be used to contact the participants.

Generally, information will be destroyed or permanently de-identified when it is no longer required; however, some information is required to be kept permanently under the University’s Records Management - Retention and Disposal of University Records Procedure.

Access to Personal Information
The University will ensure that personal information is accurate, complete and up-to-date. The University will ensure individuals are able to apply for access to his or her personal information held by the University (unless there is good reason for refusing access) and take reasonable steps to correct any information that is not accurate or complete.

Access and amendment requests, questions in relation to concerns about privacy, the University’s management of personal information or to make a complaint should be directed to the University’s Privacy Officer or the Northern Territory Information Commissioner.
