The Graduation Ceremony

Students participating in university graduation ceremonies join a rich tradition, which dates back to the 12th Century. The ceremony, presided over by the Chancellor, serves as the official conferral of awards obtained by students. Prior to the ceremony they are “graduands” – those eligible to graduate - but upon conferral they become graduates.

Academic dress is comprised of a gown, and depending on the level of award, a stole or hood and a trencher or bonnet. In line with British university graduation tradition, the Charles Darwin University Chancellor’s robes are embroidered with gold thread, while the Vice-Chancellor’s robes are embroidered with silver. The official regalia worn by members of the Academic Procession reflect the diversity of qualifications and universities represented - the hoods worn by graduating students identify them as a Charles Darwin University graduate in their chosen discipline.

The official conferral of awards takes place during the ceremony and is undertaken by the Chancellor. After the official conferral of awards, each student will be individually acknowledged and presented with their award. This public acknowledgement is a very important part of the ceremony - it gives the graduate an opportunity to be congratulated on their achievement and it also serves to validate the student’s graduate status.

The Chancellor’s Chair

The Chancellor’s chair was a gift to the University from the Australian National University in 2009, and was made by Mr Timothy Foster. Mr Foster is a professional furniture maker and teacher with over 30 years’ experience in industry, and divides his time between working for commission and teaching. The design of the chair was driven primarily by the importance of its ceremonial function and the desire to create a visually engaging chair, able to claim its place in the room and focus the attention of the congregation. The chair is made from Delinia timber, which is a species native to New Guinea, where it was sustainably sourced and certified by the Forest Stewardship Council. It was chosen for its rich colour, fine grain, stability and strength, and also its relevance in proximity to Darwin. The CDU Crest at the top of the chair is hand-shaped and finished, and was produced in collaboration with gold and silversmith, Mr Shaun Booth.

The Vice-Chancellor’s and Deputy Chancellor’s chairs were made in 2011 by Mr Matt Davidson. Mr Davidson is a local furniture craftsman and builder whose work can be seen throughout Darwin, including the CDU Chancellery building and the Darwin Convention Centre. These chairs were designed to complement the Chancellor’s chair and are made from Silky Oak. This timber was chosen for its contrasting colour, although the figure and grain are very similar to the Chancellor’s chair.
The Seasons Fanfare

The Seasons Fanfare was commissioned by Charles Darwin University to coincide with its 25th Anniversary. Composed by Dr Leif Sundstrup, the work celebrates both the diverse Territory seasons and the celebration of the university ritual with understated transformations representing the Darwinian principals of life. Although a modern work in contraction, the fanfare is both accessible and memorable, framing the academic environment and lasting tradition of the Charles Darwin University.

The Fanfare represents both the antiquity and grandeur of university life, based on three recurring and transforming themes: The University, The Dignitaries, and The Seasons. Amongst the developing musical subjects throughout the fanfare can be heard distinct representations of the seasons including ‘the build up’ with thunder storms, slow moving breezes of the tranquil dry, and a hint of the Darwin’s Finches (Galápagos finches) which played an important part in his theories.

The work is written in a traditionally classical style to reflect the long and important history of the Charles Darwin University and its maturation over the past twenty-five years.
A Message from the Chancellor

As Chancellor of Charles Darwin University it is an honour and a privilege to congratulate the graduands of 2012.

Based on 50 years of education tradition, Charles Darwin University was formed through the merger of the Northern Territory University, Centralian College, the Northern Territory Rural College and the Menzies School of Health Research. This dynamic institution has grown into a place of learning for an increasing number of Territorians and people from across our nation and the world.

Charles Darwin University offers an increasingly flexible approach to education, with a wide range of study options, high standards of teaching and an engaging learning environment. This is a university that aims to inspire its students to acquire the skills and knowledge to change their worlds for their own good and the good of the community.

As well as being a celebration of knowledge, graduation ceremonies allow students to share their pride and satisfaction in achieving their goals with their family, friends, and the University staff who have supported and encouraged them throughout their studies.

Graduation should not be a farewell to Charles Darwin University. We look forward to welcoming back our graduates as members of the Alumni or through continuing formal studies and to the many symposia, lectures, concerts and events held at the University each year.

Congratulations again to the graduates of 2012. We have no doubt we will be hearing of your achievements in your work and the community in the future.

Her Honour the Honourable Sally Thomas AM
Chancellor
This is a very important event in your life as you graduate from Charles Darwin University. You will have grown in knowledge and understanding during your time as a student at the University and, by making the most of your university experiences will make a difference not only to your own future and that of your family, but importantly to the Northern Territory and the community in which you live and work.

You are part of a dynamic and rapidly changing world particularly in the generation of new knowledge and innovative approaches to solving complex globally relevant problems – ongoing change is quite simply part of life. Change also provides opportunities and challenges that I hope you will embrace and as a result make a real contribution to the adaptive and evolving society in which we live. Remember Charles Darwin, the namesake of our University, once said: “It is not the strongest of the species that survive, not the most intelligent, but the one most responsive to change.”

We live in an age where information on any subject is growing at an ever-increasing rate and technology is rapidly changing the way we live, work and enjoy ourselves. To respond to this changing environment, and to be a successful contributor to it, you must continue to learn and to strive to apply what you have learned to the challenges you face. I hope your time at Charles Darwin University has given you a thirst for life long learning and that you will be open to new ideas, and to doing things differently and for the better in the years ahead.

As a graduate of Charles Darwin University, you join the Alumni of a university that provides vibrant learning, life-changing experiences and graduating individuals with the ability to be excellent thinkers, workers and members of society: a university that equips its graduates with the generic skills to thrive in a complex world.

I hope you have enjoyed your university experience and that you will continue to learn and, through your words and actions, contribute to the development and reputation of Charles Darwin University, a university that aspires to work with its alumni, wherever they may be, to provide an enriching experience.

This ceremony is one of celebration; you have achieved a significant milestone and we are proud of you. We join with your family and friends in saying “congratulations” and best wishes for a bright and rewarding future.

Thesis Title: Coral Biomonitoring of a Macrotidal Harbour in the Wet/Dry Tropics; Darwin, North Australia

This PhD thesis investigated two species of brain corals, Goniastrea aspera and Platygyra sinensis, to determine their ability to act as monitors of reef health and water quality in turbid marine environments, such as Darwin Harbour. Corals are able to provide an archive of environmental data within their skeletons. Corals from Darwin Harbour Reefs were sampled, including a coral core from Nightcliff reef that provided information pre-1900. It was found that these coral species were able to detect low levels of metal pollution in a near pristine environment. Higher levels of stress were also detected in these corals on reefs that were more greatly impacted by freshwater and sedimentation. This thesis concludes that these two species of brain corals can be used to investigate long term trends in metal pollution and reef health, including the effects of climate change in tropical marine environments.

Andrew Craig Edwards
Thesis Title: I spy with my little eye, something beginning with Fire
Also known as: The Remote Sensing of Fire Severity in the Tropical Savannas of Northern Australia

Andrew made a mathematical model from detailed information he collected on the ground to apply to satellite images so as to map the amount of vegetation consumed by fires, that is, fire severity mapping. The detailed information was collected in a helicopter over recently burnt tropical savanna woodland of which there is plenty in northern Australia. He used a hand held device very similar to the sensors on satellites. These sensors measure the proportion of sunlight reflected back from the Earth’s surface and can tell us a great deal about the objects that reflect the light. This is the science of remote sensing.

What Andrew found was that the amount of blackened material is not easily detected by the satellite sensor and therefore does not help in describing the severity of the fire. What is important is the change in the amount of, not just the green vegetation but also, the living and dead stems, branches and limbs, and also the amount of living and dried grass. This may sound obvious but from this information Andrew was able to work out how much change in these amounts of vegetation changed the satellite image information in such a way that a map could be made that described how severe the fire was at any point in the landscape, to a fairly high degree of accuracy.

Thesis Title: Events Detection in ECG and APG Signals

The focus of this thesis is to detect and analyze the main events in the electrocardiogram (ECG) and acceleration photoplethysmogram (APG) signals. One of the key remaining challenges in ECG signal analysis is a reliable detection of the onset, offset, and maximum amplitude for QRS, P and T waves. Similarly, the detection of the main events in APG has not been extensively investigated to date. For accurate heart diagnosis, it is crucial to develop reliable automatic detection algorithms for the QRS complex, P and T waves in ECG signals and a, b, c, d and e waves in APG signals. Novel algorithms are proposed to detect the main events in ECG and APG signals which are robust to noise and numerically efficient tested over a large number of databases. Results show that APG device may replace some of the traditional cardiovascular diagnostic tools.

Thesis Title: Using statistical methods to evaluate and improve mosquito control for mosquito-borne disease reduction in the Northern Territory of Australia

Mosquito borne-diseases are responsible for high rates of morbidity and mortality worldwide. Ross River, Barmah Forest, Murray Valley encephalitis and Kunjin viruses are presently endemic in the Northern Territory. Here, I describe the epidemiology of the major endemic mosquito-borne diseases of the Northern Territory, and evaluate control strategies adopted to reduce mosquito abundance and disease transmission. Some findings include the effects of drainage channels, habitat modification, over time in three Darwin salt-marshes and one freshwater swamp near Alice Springs. In addition to significantly reducing vector-borne disease transmission and pest biting; habitat modification restored all swamps to closer to their original ecosystems. I develop accurate predictive models for RRV infections in the Northern Territory, using weather and vector numbers. These findings can assist mosquito control programs in northern Australia and tropical regions worldwide.

Thesis Title: Improving Diagnosis and Management of Children with Non Cystic Fibrosis Bronchiectasis

Non Cystic-Fibrosis bronchiectasis is increasingly recognised as a cause of chronic respiratory disease in children. Yet it is a neglected condition with gaps in knowledge in major clinical issues pertaining to its diagnosis, management and outcome. This thesis attempts to fill some of these gaps.

Overall the work of this thesis has shown that the radiological definition of bronchiectasis in children is not the same as adults and a standardised definition of pulmonary exacerbation could be formulated using a combination of clinical and systemic biomarkers. The new definition of radiological bronchiectasis and pulmonary exacerbation proposed in this thesis has brought attention to a condition which has long been ignored, and would certainly standardise many future research studies and clinical protocols. Continuing research aimed at utilizing the definition of exacerbation to formulate Best Management Practice Guidelines for paediatric bronchiectasis is essential in improving our understanding of this important cause of chronic respiratory morbidity.

Thesis Title: Recreation, Self-Therapy and Addiction: Discursive Constructions of Drinking to Intoxication in Focus Group Talk

Despite societal messages portraying binge drinking as problematic, this pattern of alcohol consumption tends to be the norm amongst Australian youth. What was unclear, and what this research set out to investigate, was the kind of messages regarding drinking to intoxication (DTI) present among young people themselves. Eight focus groups were conducted with 30 young people to examine constructions that young drinkers use to justify or excuse personal intoxication. Application of the principles of Discursive Psychology (Edwards & Potter, 2001) revealed three main constructions: Recreation, Self-Therapy and Addiction. The repertoire of recreation allowed the construction of DTI as a pleasurable pastime. The repertoire of self-therapy facilitated the construction of DTI as a response to a stressful event. Lastly, the repertoire of addiction positioned repeated DTI as symptomatic of uncontrollable pathology. These ways of constructing DTI are similar to constructions of other health risk behaviour such as smoking and injecting.

Thesis Title: Academic Discourses and the twenty first century context: Empowering all students with comprehension and critical engagement

In a post-Bradley, deregulated market, the student demographic of university’s in Australia is increasingly diverse, spanning age groups from 18-75, cultures, socio economic and educational backgrounds and English language proficiency. Evidence suggests that for new students (especially those from less literate backgrounds), high levels of abstract and technical language exclude them from actively participating in academic discourse communities, thus, denying them an opportunity to succeed, affecting their performance and increasing university drop-out rates.

This thesis integrates learning theory and systemic functional language analysis to provide an understanding of the linguistic features of academic discourses and an understanding of the literacy and learning issues for 21st century students. These understandings lead to a proposal for an inclusive pedagogy which is effective in apprenticing students to become successful participants in the discourse and culture of academia.

Thesis Title: To What extent do Perceptions of Racism Deter and Prevent Aboriginal men from using public health

The aim of this study was to ascertain what if there were any issues that deterred Aboriginal men from utilising mainstream health care services. The methodology used to gather data was ethnographic in nature and included interviews with Aboriginal men who were using mainstream health services at the time of the study. The study revealed that Aboriginal men have an entrenched belief that their presence causes frustration at mainstream health care provider and that this belief impacts on their comfort when they are using these services. The study provides new information that is both practical and informative to those working in health care.

Thesis Title: Three Dimensional Gully Mapping and Erosion Quantification within a Geoinformatics Framework

This thesis presents and uses a Geoinformatics based framework for three dimensional (3D) gully mapping focused on spatio-temporal analysis and quantification of gully erosion. The developed framework incorporates traditional and cutting edge spatial data and technologies. This framework is used to create Digital Surface Model (DSM) using Cartosat-1 stereo imagery and stereo aerial photographs. Gullies are mapped in 3D in an innovative way and erosion volumes are calculated. This research also provides a regional and global comparison of sediment yield and contributes to calculate sediment budget in Northern Territory. It helps land managers to formulate land policies to prevent land from degradation.

Jamie Andrew Seaton
Thesis Title: Place Discourses in the Context of High Levels of Population Migration

The aim of this thesis is to investigate the relationship between population migration and place. Human geographers have suggested that high levels of population migration influence the way places are produced and maintained. Riddett (1995) expressed her concern that extreme population migration in Darwin (NT) has made residents less aware of the cultural significance of the city’s places. If such an assumption is true, then there will be implications for the management of places that are characterised by high levels of migration. My research explores this growing assumption.

In this thesis I produce a case study on Mindil Beach and conduct an historical investigation into this relationship between migration and place in Darwin. I use the case study to analyse the way Mindil Beach discourses (contained in Darwin’s major newspaper) are influenced by the NT’s migration patterns. My comparative analysis of these data sets advances social theory and provides new alternatives for the management of transient places.

Thesis Title: Assessment of an integrated cashew improvement program, using weaver ants as a major component, in cashew production in Vietnam

This study assessed an integrated cashew improvement program (ICI), which uses weaver ants as a major component, for cashew production in Vietnam, focusing on pest control and economics. The study used a combination of field experiments, field observations, and laboratory rearing to assess levels of pest damage, arthropod diversity, and the costs under the ICI compared to farmers’ conventional farming methods (FCF), which rely heavily on insecticides. The results showed that weaver ants effectively controlled the main insect pests on cashew and reduced the pest damage to an acceptable level compared to the FCF. The ICI program enhanced arthropod diversity and increased the number of predators on pest species, and generally produced similar nut yield and higher quality nuts, but reduced expenses and increased the farmers’ net profits.

Thesis Title: Carbon and Cyclone Ecology of Natural and Cultivated Arboreal Landscapes in the Monsoonal Northern Territory

This thesis examines the carbon ecology of a range of naturally evolved and cultivated arboreal communities, and how carbon accumulation is affected by cyclones in particular, and climatic parameters generally, in the monsoonal Northern Territory, Australia. It explores the complex interactions between climate, soils and nutrients, varying with latitude and topography, and how they affect above and below ground carbon accumulation. The hypothesis that trees protected houses during Tropical Cyclone Tracy was supported by empirical data in Darwin’s newer northern suburbs, but not in the older southern suburbs. Orientation and proximity to the cyclone path, topographic location, house type, allotment area and tree types interact to influence the effect of tree cover on cyclone house damage. There is sufficient evidence in this thesis to suggest that well-planned and well-managed urban tree cover can play important protective roles ameliorating microclimate, sequestering carbon and mitigating cyclone impacts in tropical, monsoonal cities.

Thesis Title: Processes for Effective Management: Learning from Agencies and Warlpiri People Involved in Managing the Northern Tanami Indigenous Protected Area, Australia

Through a case study of the Northern Tanami IPA I investigate how local management and partnering agency agendas are being achieved by examining the management intent and practice of key partners: Warlpiri people from Lajamanu; the Central Land Council (CLC); and the Federal Government Department of Environment, Water, Heritage and the Arts (DEWHA).

The results of this research show differing management interests amongst Warlpiri people and partnering agencies. This has constrained the achievement of management agendas within the Northern Tanami IPA, as partnership creation has not given enough attention to knowledge sharing, negotiation and investment in decision-making and implementation. Further to this analysis I outline a number of management interventions that should be instituted to build the management resilience of the Northern Tanami IPA into the future.

Congratulations on completing your award from Charles Darwin University. I hope you will never forget your time with us and I encourage you to stay in touch with the University as you continue through your life journey.

I wish you every success in your future endeavours and encourage you to contribute to the Alumni web site and University publications. We would be delighted if you would share your experiences of the University, future career achievements and personal triumphs.

Charles Darwin University Alumni has been set up to support and promote the interests of our graduates, and to foster an environment where members can contribute to the future of the University. The Alumni also provides a professional and social connection for all people who have contributed to Charles Darwin University.

Alumni membership is free. You can complete your Alumni registration online through the Alumni website at www.cdu.edu.au/alumni

On behalf of the Alumni and the University, I welcome you into the Alumni family and I look forward to continuing our relationship with you.

Yours sincerely
