May - June Graduation Ceremonies 2013

The Chancellor, Her Honour the Honourable Sally Thomas AM, presiding

Darwin Convention Centre
Thursday 23 May 2013
Friday 24 May 2013

Alice Springs Convention Centre
Thursday 13 June 2013
The Graduation Ceremony

Students participating in university graduation ceremonies join a rich tradition, which dates back to the 12th Century. The ceremony, presided over by the Chancellor, serves as the official conferral of awards obtained by students. Prior to the ceremony they are "graduands" – those eligible to graduate – but upon conferral they become graduates.

Academic dress is comprised of a gown, and depending on the level of award, a stole or hood and a trencher or bonnet. In line with British university graduation tradition, the Charles Darwin University Chancellor’s robes are embroidered with gold thread, while the Vice-Chancellor’s robes are embroidered with silver. The official regalia worn by members of the Academic Procession reflect the diversity of qualifications and universities represented – the hoods worn by graduating students identify them as a Charles Darwin University graduate in their chosen discipline.

The official conferral of awards takes place during the ceremony and is undertaken by the Chancellor. After the official conferral of awards, each student will be individually acknowledged and presented with their award. This public acknowledgement is a very important part of the ceremony – it gives the graduate an opportunity to be congratulated on their achievement and it also serves to validate the student’s graduate status.

The Chancellor's Chair

The Chancellor’s chair was a gift to the University from the Australian National University in 2009, and was made by Mr Timothy Foster. Mr Foster is a professional furniture maker and teacher with over 30 years’ experience in industry, and divides his time between working for commission and teaching. The design of the chair was driven primarily by the importance of its ceremonial function and the desire to create a visually engaging chair, able to claim its place in the room and focus the attention of the congregation. The chair is made from Delinia timber, which is a species native to New Guinea, where it was sustainably sourced and certified by the Forest Stewardship Council. It was chosen for its rich colour, fine grain, stability and strength, and also its relevance in proximity to Darwin. The CDU Crest at the top of the chair is hand-shaped and finished, and was produced in collaboration with gold and silversmith, Mr Shaun Booth.

The Vice-Chancellor’s and Deputy Chancellor’s chairs were made in 2011 by Mr Matt Davidson. Mr Davidson is a local furniture craftsman and builder whose work can be seen throughout Darwin, including the CDU Chancellery building and the Darwin Convention Centre. These chairs were designed to complement the Chancellor’s chair and are made from Silky Oak. This timber was chosen for its contrasting colour, although the figure and grain are very similar to the Chancellor’s chair.
The Seasons Fanfare

The Seasons Fanfare was commissioned by Charles Darwin University to coincide with its 25th Anniversary. Composed by Dr Leif Sundstrup, the work celebrates both the diverse Territory seasons and the celebration of the university ritual with understated transformations representing the Darwinian principals of life. Although a modern work in contraction, the fanfare is both accessible and memorable, framing the academic environment and lasting tradition of the Charles Darwin University.

The Fanfare represents both the antiquity and grandeur of university life, based on three recurring and transforming themes: The University, The Dignitaries, and The Seasons. Amongst the developing musical subjects throughout the fanfare can be heard distinct representations of the seasons including ‘the build up’ with thunder storms, slow moving breezes of the tranquil dry, and a hint of the Darwin’s Finches (Galápagos finches) which played an important part in his theories.

The work is written in a traditionally classical style to reflect the long and important history of the Charles Darwin University and its maturation over the past twenty-five years.

The Mace

For thousands of years the mace has been used as a symbol of government. Originally a weapon in the shape of a club, often spiked, it has evolved to become a decorative and ceremonial object of great value and beauty. The ceremonial mace is documented to have been used since the 16th Century. Carried by a Mace Bearer, it is intended to represent the protection of a person of authority, such as reigning monarchs and religious leaders. Oxford University began using a mace for ceremonial occasions in the late 16th Century and Cambridge University adopted a mace in 1626.

The mace is traditionally a gift, and the Charles Darwin University Mace was gifted from Flinders University Council in 2010. Glenice Lesley Matthews was commissioned to design and make the University Mace. Glenice Matthews, well known for her work as a silversmith, designed and made the Mace for Edith Cowan University.

Work on the design for the CDU Mace began in late 2010 and final approval of the design was given by the Chancellor in early 2011. It incorporates images of a “flame of knowledge” linking to the traditional use of firesticks as a way of passing on knowledge, Charles Darwin’s telescope and the pandanus. The CDU brand features strongly on a tropical timber shaft with bands of sterling silver and yellow gold.

Before completing the piece, however, Glenice Matthews passed away. Completion of the project was entrusted to Samuel Farmer, a silversmith who worked with Glenice for more than 20 years. In 1984, he designed and made the Ceremonial Mace and President’s Medallion for Pittsburg State University, Kansas, USA.

The Mace of Charles Darwin University represents the authority of the University Council and its head, the Chancellor, and was first used in May Graduation Ceremonies in 2013.
A Message from the Chancellor

As Chancellor of Charles Darwin University it is an honour and a privilege to congratulate the graduands of 2013.

Based on 50 years of education tradition, Charles Darwin University was formed through the merger of the Northern Territory University, Centralian College, the Northern Territory Rural College and the Menzies School of Health Research. This dynamic institution has grown into a place of learning for an increasing number of Territorians and people from across our nation and the world.

Charles Darwin University offers an increasingly flexible approach to education, with a wide range of study options, high standards of teaching and an engaging learning environment. This is a university that aims to inspire its students to acquire the skills and knowledge to change their worlds for their own good and the good of the community.

As well as being a celebration of knowledge, graduation ceremonies allow students to share their pride and satisfaction in achieving their goals with their family, friends, and the University staff who have supported and encouraged them throughout their studies.

Graduation should not be a farewell to Charles Darwin University. We look forward to welcoming back our graduates as members of the Alumni or through continuing formal studies and to the many symposia, lectures, concerts and events held at the University each year.

Congratulations again to the graduates of 2013. We have no doubt we will be hearing of your achievements in your work and the community in the future.

Her Honour the Honourable Sally Thomas AM
Chancellor
A Message from the Vice-Chancellor

This is a very important event in your life as you graduate from Charles Darwin University. You will have grown in knowledge and understanding during your time as a student at the University and, by making the most of your university experiences will make a difference not only to your own future and that of your family, but importantly to the Northern Territory and the community in which you live and work.

You are part of a dynamic and rapidly changing world particularly in the generation of new knowledge and innovative approaches to solving complex globally relevant problems – ongoing change is quite simply part of life. Change also provides opportunities and challenges that I hope you will embrace and as a result make a real contribution to the adaptive and evolving society in which we live. Remember Charles Darwin, the namesake of our University, once said: “It is not the strongest of the species that survive, not the most intelligent, but the one most responsive to change.”

We live in an age where information on any subject is growing at an ever-increasing rate and technology is rapidly changing the way we live, work and enjoy ourselves. To respond to this changing environment, and to be a successful contributor to it, you must continue to learn and to strive to apply what you have learned to the challenges you face. I hope your time at Charles Darwin University has given you a thirst for life long learning and that you will be open to new ideas, and to doing things differently and for the better in the years ahead.

As a graduate of Charles Darwin University, you join the Alumni of a university that provides vibrant learning, life-changing experiences and graduating individuals with the ability to be excellent thinkers, workers and members of society: a university that equips its graduates with the generic skills to thrive in a complex world.

I hope you have enjoyed your university experience and that you will continue to learn and, through your words and actions, contribute to the development and reputation of Charles Darwin University, a university that aspires to work with its alumni, wherever they may be, to provide an enriching experience.

This ceremony is one of celebration; you have achieved a significant milestone and we are proud of you. We join with your family and friends in saying “congratulations” and best wishes for a bright and rewarding future.

Thesis Title: Impacts of Anthropogenic Fires and Invasive Ants on Native Ant Diversity in New Caledonia: From Genes to Communities

Habitat destruction, biological invasions and their interaction are global drivers of biodiversity loss. Anthropogenic fires and invasive ants are both threatening the New Caledonian hotspot of biodiversity, but their impacts on the biota are not well understood. Native ants, because of their great ecological importance in tropical biomes and their sensitivity to disturbance, were used to understand such impacts. Processes were studied at different spatial (global, regional, local) and temporal (short and long term) scales, and at different levels of biological organisation (community, species, genes). The study improved our knowledge of New Caledonian ants and documented the distribution of exotic species in relation to habitat at the island scale. Natural experiments were used to show that fire, by creating macro- and microhabitats favoured by invasive ants, facilitates invasion, which then causes further diversity declines, either in the short- or long-term. This study highlights the advantage of a holistic approach to investigating complex biodiversity-related issues.

Thesis Title: The Inter-relationships between Body Build, Body Composition, Body Fat Distribution, Metabolic Syndrome and Inflammation in Adult Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander People

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples suffer a disproportionate burden of chronic, but largely preventable diseases compared to other Australians. The thesis examines first, the body build and body composition of adult Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander participants, and second, seeks to determine the relationship between body size, and composition and health indicators of chronic diseases, such as chronic kidney disease, diabetes and obesity. Key findings of the thesis include: 1. Differences in skeletal body build were evident between groups of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander participants; 2. Longer leg-length for height was most strongly associated with central obesity in overweight adults; 3. Blood markers of chronic disease were observed in participants with a predominant pattern of abdominal obesity, even if they were not grossly overweight. 4. Abdominal obesity was evident in participants without albuminuria (a marker of chronic kidney damage), and was associated with the expression of fat-related biomarkers.

Thesis Title: Legitimacy, Positioning and Paradigm: Behind the Northern Territory’s ‘Whole-of-Government’ Approach to Suicide Prevention

This research is a case study of the whole of government approach for suicide prevention in Australia’s Northern Territory between 2005 and 2011. It describes the operation of the approach and considers the purposes the approach served in this instance. Data sources included observation of the interdepartmental committee as well as semi-structured interviews with participants and document review. The research describes a disjuncture between the formal representation of the process and how the committee actually operated. This suggests a symbolic dimension and breaks from the common perception that whole of government approaches are designed to achieve specific ends. The thesis argues that the interdepartmental committee and its policy output were used to represent a legitimate approach to suicide prevention, and to position suicide onto the NT political agenda and promote the paradigm of joint responsibility for suicide prevention.

Matthew James Neave
Thesis Title: Polychaeta (Annelida) as Biological Assessment Tools for Monitoring Marine Ecosystem Health

Neave examined marine worms (polychaetes) for their potential to indicate the health of marine environments that are influenced by human activities. Several different levels of ‘biological complexity’ were examined for their indicator potential, from highly complex polychaete communities through to low complexity changes in gene expression. The initial experiment chapter focused on the changes induced in polychaete communities in the vicinity of an alumina refinery. These changes were obvious and easily detectable; they were, however, time consuming to detect. This time requirement was a significant drawback, leading the author to look for indicators at finer levels of biological complexity. Accordingly, the next chapter used changes in gene and protein expression as an indicator of pollution. The expressions of several genes were altered in polluted environments and had potential as a rapid assessment of health. A limitation of this approach however, was that gene expression changes may not have indicated broader ecosystem changes, which would cause unwarranted alarm. Thus, the final experiment chapter examined a slightly higher level of complexity, which was the bacteria living on or within polychaetes. These bacterial communities also changed in polluted environments, suggesting that gene expression changes were indicative of broader changes. Changes in the bacteria themselves were also nominated as a relatively novel health assessment. In the final chapter, the pros and cons of using polychaetes as indicators were discussed and issues surrounding biological indicators more generally were considered. Overall, polychaetes were found to be good indicators of health in marine environments.

Thesis Title: Strategies for Biodiversity Conservation in the Lower Mekong
This thesis explores conservation and development interventions in forest conservation areas of Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam. One research method develops and analyses 164 variables capturing the context and management of 15 areas to explore conservation at multiple scales, the threats to forests and implementation strategies of organisations. A second research method uses a systems dynamic model to explore the effect of environmental and development scenarios on biodiversity and livelihoods at Cat Tien National Park, Vietnam. The results demonstrate that conservation in the Lower Mekong is influenced by a variety of factors at multiple scales. As a result of environmental, social, historical and political context, diverse and pragmatic strategies are employed by conservation organisations. To improve biodiversity conservation outcomes, strategies require a greater understanding of local-level context and wider societal influences. Working with multiple actors to build consensus for the management of conservation areas can enhance conservation outcomes.

Paul Alexander Royce
Thesis Title: Biosecurity through Community Engagement
While there are many biosecurity measures in place to protect specific agricultural industries and the broader environment from exotic pests and disease, biological incursions still occur with some regularity across Australia. Agricultural industries and local, state and national government agencies believe that biosecurity requires a 'whole of community' approach as all members have the capacity to actively participate in the surveillance and reporting of biological anomalies in a local area. This research therefore adopts a qualitative, ethnographic approach to look beyond traditional or existing methods of information provision to determine the most effective methods to engage different population groups to raise biosecurity awareness within a north Australian agricultural community. Specific attention is given to better understand how the diverse mix of human relations within this community has the capacity to generate new knowledge and motivate community participation, which in turn fosters change and transformation.

Thesis Title: Development and Implementation of Timor-Leste Health Policy Framework 2002: A Governance Analysis
The roles of the Ministry of Health, the District Health Services and their development partners are examined in relation to health governance, policies and outcomes within the bounds of Timor-Leste's Health Policy Framework 2002. This study explores and analyses how health policy actors, decision makers and implementers engage with policy processes and elements of governance and mediate power. Two health systems, where one district performs well and one district performs poorly in terms of achieving the Ministry of Health's indicators and objectives, are compared and contrasted. Elements of governance that are essential to strengthen the national and local health systems and to improve the health status of the Timorese people are identified. The development of health policies and procedures is dominated by those with power, including donors and leaders of the political parties, which disempowers the local administration and communities. Lack of responsiveness on the part of the central and local administration is the foremost concern of both districts. This lack of responsiveness jeopardises the implementation of health programs.

Thesis Title: Reported Gambling Problems amongst the Indigenous Population of Australia with a Focus on the Northern Territory

This thesis highlights the changing nature of gambling within the Indigenous population of Australia over the last 60 years, and draws attention to the negative consequences that may arise as a result of problematic gambling. A literature review of gambling by Indigenous Australians and the relationship between gambling problems and a range of indicators informed the body of the work. The thesis analysed gambling problems at the national, Northern Territory and community level using representative survey data. Analyses identified characteristics of Indigenous people reporting gambling problems in their family and social networks, while the review identified changes in gambling patterns since the introduction of self-determination policies in the 1970’s. A comprehensive public health approach to reducing harms associated with gambling was proposed, that includes culturally appropriate public education, and improved community engagement and counselling.

Thesis Title: Never Judge a Book by its Cover – Comparative Life History Traits of Two Morphologically Similar Carcharhinid Sharks in Northern Australia

As anthropogenic pressures including over-fishing and climate change intensify, high-order predators are being threatened within coastal communities. Predicting consequences hinges on our understanding of how species similarities and differences shape ecosystem function and resilience. I compared ecological similarity between two morphologically similar carcharhinids, bull (Carcharhinus leucas) and pigeye (C. amboinensis) sharks in northern Australia. Ecological similarity was measured by comparing a) age structure and growth dynamics, b) habitat use and c) genetic population structure and phylogeography. Results indicate these two morphologically similar carcharhinid sharks have similar age structure and growth dynamics, yet different patterns of habitat use, population genetic structure and phylogeography. As such, these results confirm that morphological likeliness does not equate to similar ecologies in these large high-order sharks.

Thesis Title: Listening to Elders’ Stories: Transforming Nursing Students’ Perceptions about Gerontology Nursing

The aims of this study were to find out how the experience of listening to elders’ stories impacted on baccalaureate nursing students; whether the experience helped them feel more comfortable talking with elders; and if the experience led to a shift in attitudes and beliefs toward elders and nursing practice. The methodology of narrative inquiry and life story provided a context in which to explore the meaning that the nursing students ascribed to their experiences. The findings indicate that the nursing students were transformed both personally and professionally by listening to the stories of elders. Consequently, they discovered that the experience changed their attitudes and improved the way they provided nursing care to elders. This supports the desired outcomes of gerontology nursing education and confirms that listening to elders’ stories is a valuable educational strategy.

Alumni Welcome

Congratulations on completing your award from Charles Darwin University. I hope you will never forget your time with us and I encourage you to stay in touch with the University as you continue through your life journey.

I wish you every success in your future endeavours and encourage you to contribute to the Alumni web site and University publications. We would be delighted if you would share your experiences of the University, future career achievements and personal triumphs.

Charles Darwin University Alumni has been set up to support and promote the interests of our graduates, and to foster an environment where members can contribute to the future of the University. The Alumni also provides a professional and social connection for all people who have contributed to Charles Darwin University.

Alumni membership is free. You can complete your Alumni registration online through the Alumni website at www.cdu.edu.au/alumni

On behalf of the Alumni and the University, I welcome you into the Alumni family and I look forward to continuing our relationship with you.

Yours sincerely

Her Honour The Honourable Sally Thomas AM
Chancellor
