The Graduation Ceremony

Students participating in university graduation ceremonies join a rich tradition, which dates back to the 12th century. The ceremony, presided over by the Chancellor, serves as the official conferral of awards obtained by students. Prior to the ceremony they are “graduands” – those eligible to graduate - but upon conferral they become graduates.

The Academic dress comprises a gown, and depending on the level of award, a stole or hood and a t trencher or bonnet. In line with British university graduation tradition, the Charles Darwin University Chancellor’s robes are embroidered with gold thread, while the Vice-Chancellor’s robes are embroidered with silver. The official regalia worn by members of the Academic Procession reflect the diversity of qualifications and universities represented - the hoods worn by graduating students identify them as a Charles Darwin University graduate in their chosen discipline.

The official conferral of awards takes place during the ceremony and is undertaken by the Chancellor. After the official conferral of awards, each student will be individually acknowledged and presented with their award. This public acknowledgement is a very important part of the ceremony - it gives the graduate an opportunity to be congratulated on their achievement and it also serves to validate the student’s graduate status.

The Chancellor’s Chair

The Chancellor’s chair was a gift to the University from the Australian National University in 2009, and was made by Mr Timothy Foster. Mr Foster is a professional furniture maker and teacher with over 30 years’ experience in industry, and divides his time between working for commission and teaching. The chair is made from Delinia timber, which is a species native to New Guinea, where it was sustainably sourced and certified by the Forest Stewardship Council. It was chosen for its rich colour, fine grain, stability and strength, and also its relevance in proximity to Darwin.

The Vice-Chancellor’s and Deputy Chancellor’s chairs were made in 2011 by Mr Matt Davidson. Mr Davidson is a local furniture craftsman and builder whose work can be seen throughout Darwin, including the CDU Chancellery building and the Darwin Convention Centre. These chairs were designed to complement the Chancellor’s chair and are made from Silky Oak. This timber was chosen for its contrasting colour, although the figure and grain are very similar to the Chancellor’s chair.
The Seasons Fanfare

The Seasons Fanfare was commissioned by Charles Darwin University to coincide with its 25th Anniversary. Composed by Dr Leif Sundstrup, the work celebrates both the diverse Territory seasons and the celebration of the university ritual with understated transformations representing the Darwinian principles of life. Although a modern work in contraction, the fanfare is both accessible and memorable, framing the academic environment and lasting tradition of the Charles Darwin University.

The Fanfare represents both the antiquity and grandeur of university life, based on three recurring and transforming themes: The University, The Dignitaries, and The Seasons. Amongst the developing musical subjects throughout the fanfare can be heard distinct representations of the seasons including ‘the build up’ with thunder storms, slow moving breezes of the tranquil dry, and a hint of the Darwin’s Finches (Galápagos finches) which played an important part in his theories.

The work is written in a traditionally classical style to reflect the long and important history of the Charles Darwin University and its maturation over the past twenty-five years.

The Mace

For thousands of years the mace has been used as a symbol of government. Originally a weapon in the shape of a club, often spiked, it has evolved to become a decorative and ceremonial object of great value and beauty. The ceremonial mace is documented to have been used since the 16th century. Carried by a Mace Bearer, it is intended to represent the protection of a person of authority, such as reigning monarchs and religious leaders. Oxford University began using a mace for ceremonial occasions in the late 16th century and Cambridge University adopted a mace in 1626.

The mace is traditionally a gift, and the Charles Darwin University Mace was gifted from Flinders University Council in 2010. Glenice Lesley Matthews was commissioned to design and make the University Mace. Glenice Matthews, well known for her work as a silversmith, designed and made the Mace for Edith Cowan University.

Work on the design for the CDU Mace began in late 2010 and final approval of the design was given by the Chancellor in early 2011. It incorporates images of a “flame of knowledge” linking to the traditional use of firesticks as a way of passing on knowledge, Charles Darwin’s telescope and the pandanus. The CDU brand features strongly on a tropical timber shaft with bands of sterling silver and yellow gold.

Before completing the piece, however, Glenice Matthews passed away. Completion of the project was entrusted to Samuel Farmer, a silversmith who worked with Glenice for more than 20 years. In 1984, he designed and made the Ceremonial Mace and President’s Medallion for Pittsburg State University, Kansas, USA.

The Mace of Charles Darwin University represents the authority of the University Council and its head, the Chancellor, and was first used in May Graduation Ceremonies in 2013.
Indigenous Stole

To mark the completion of a University program and to recognise the achievements of Indigenous students, the Office of the Pro Vice-Chancellor Indigenous Leadership awards mementos to be worn at graduation. In a pre-graduation Valedictory Ceremony for Indigenous Higher Education and Vocational Education and Training graduands, all graduands are presented with a CDU Indigenous Leadership pin. In addition, those students who have completed a VET Certificate III, IV, Diploma and/or higher education course receive an Indigenous stole.

These graduation stoles were first awarded in 2011 – the design was selected as it was seen to best reflect the colours of the two distinct cultures of Aboriginal Australia and the Torres Strait Islands. The decision to award these stoles acknowledges that while course enrolments for Indigenous students are increasing, completion rates are not increasing commensurately. The stole therefore celebrates and commemorates the massive achievement of our Indigenous graduates.
As Chancellor of Charles Darwin University it is an honour and a privilege to congratulate the graduands of 2015.

Based on 50 years of education tradition, Charles Darwin University was formed through the merger of the Northern Territory University, Centralian College, the Northern Territory Rural College and the Menzies School of Health Research. This dynamic institution has grown into a place of learning for an increasing number of Territorians and people from across our nation and the world.

Charles Darwin University offers an increasingly flexible approach to education, with a wide range of study options, high standards of teaching and an engaging learning environment. This is a university that aims to inspire its students to acquire the skills and knowledge to change their worlds for their own good and the good of the community.

As well as being a celebration of knowledge, graduation ceremonies allow students to share their pride and satisfaction in achieving their goals with their family, friends, and the University staff who have supported and encouraged them throughout their studies.

Graduation should not be a farewell to Charles Darwin University. We look forward to welcoming back our graduates as members of the Alumni or through continuing formal studies and to the many symposia, lectures, concerts and events held at the University each year.

Congratulations again to the graduates of 2015. We have no doubt we will be hearing of your achievements in your work and the community in the future.

The Honourable Sally Thomas AC
Chancellor
A Message from the Vice-Chancellor

This is a very important event in your life as you graduate from Charles Darwin University. You will have grown in knowledge and understanding during your time as a student at the University and, by making the most of your university experiences will make a difference not only to your own future and that of your family, but importantly to the Northern Territory and the community in which you live and work.

You are part of a dynamic and rapidly changing world particularly in the generation of new knowledge and innovative approaches to solving complex, globally relevant problems – ongoing change is quite simply part of life. Change also provides opportunities and challenges that I hope you will embrace and as a result make a real contribution to the adaptive and evolving society in which we live. Remember Charles Darwin, the namesake of our University, once said: “It is not the strongest of the species that survive, not the most intelligent, but the one most responsive to change.”

We live in an age where information on any subject is growing at an ever-increasing rate and technology is rapidly changing the way we live, work and enjoy ourselves. To respond to this changing environment, and to be a successful contributor to it, you must continue to learn and to strive to apply what you have learned to the challenges you face. I hope your time at Charles Darwin University has given you a thirst for lifelong learning and that you will be open to new ideas, and to doing things differently and for the better in the years ahead.

As a graduate of Charles Darwin University, you join the Alumni of a university that provides vibrant learning, life-changing experiences and graduating individuals with the ability to be excellent thinkers, workers and members of society: a university that equips its graduates with the generic skills to thrive in a complex world.

I hope you have enjoyed your university experience and that you will continue to learn and, through your words and actions, contribute to the development and reputation of Charles Darwin University, a university that aspires to work with its alumni, wherever they may be, to provide an enriching experience.

This ceremony is one of celebration; you have achieved a significant milestone and we are proud of you. We join with your family and friends in saying “congratulations” and best wishes for a bright and rewarding future.

Thesis Title: Infection Control: A psychosocial Model of Influences on Adherence to Standard Precautions

Infection prevention and control are key factors in healthcare. The introduction of Standard Precautions to prevent pathogen transmission between patients and healthcare workers was a major initiative of the 1980s yet adherence to these procedures remains suboptimal. Interviews with hospital staff led to the development of a scale to assess these factors that was then included in a theoretical model of adherence and tested with a large sample of healthcare workers. Results indicated support for the model, with three major elements predicting adherence to Standard Precautions. These are individual factors such as conscientiousness; education that is the appropriateness and rigour of healthcare workers’ training in Standard Precautions, and the organisational, such as supply of materials, modelling and enforcement. Attempts to improve adherence to Standard Precautions should adopt a multifaceted approach utilising these three domains.

Thesis Title: Growth and Survival of Hatchling Saltwater Crocodiles (Crocodylus porosus) in Captivity: the Role of Agonistic and Thermal Behaviour

Agonistic and thermal behaviour was studied in hatchling Crocodylus porosus under captive conditions. The results guided the design of experiments aimed at improving growth and survival of this species in captivity. C. porosus are born with a repertoire of 16 distinctive agonistic behaviours. Hatchling C. porosus preferred body temperatures (Tbs) between 29.4ºC and 32.6ºC, and the mean (30.9±2.3ºC SD) was not influenced by social situation or feeding status. Growth of C. porosus during the first 24 days can be used to predict ‘failure to thrive’ (FTT) affliction up to 300 days. Hatchling growth was highest at a density of 6.7/m2, and was lower at higher densities. Hatchlings afflicted with FTT and placed in a semi-natural enclosure had almost double the growth of those in standard raising pens.

Thesis Title: Global Epidemiology, Prevention and Control of Rheumatic Heart Disease with a Focus on the Pacific Region

Rheumatic heart disease (RHD) is a leading cause of cardiac disease among children in developing nations and Indigenous populations. Accurate documentation of the burden of RHD is lacking in many high-risk countries. Studies were undertaken to determine the prevalence of RHD in Fiji using echocardiography; to investigate the training of nurses in basic echocardiography; to estimate the global burden of RHD and to determine the mortality of RHD among Indigenous Australians. The prevalence of RHD in school-aged children in Fiji was measured using echocardiography. Nurses trained in basic RHD echocardiography in Fiji had high sensitivity to detect RHD. The global estimates of RHD support the contention that morbidity and mortality due to RHD have been underestimated globally. Better data will enhance advocacy to bring RHD control to those most in need.

Thesis Title: Assessing the Impact of a Marine Protected Area on Coastal Livelihoods. A Case Study from Pantar Island, NTT Province, Indonesia

The aim of this research was to assess the potential impacts of the establishment of an MPA on coastal communities on Pantar Island, located in Nusa Tenggara Timur Province, in the eastern region of Indonesia. A subsidiary aim was to make practical recommendations that would minimise the negative impacts of an MPA and optimise the benefits for local people. Application of a sustainable livelihood analysis framework demonstrated that marine-related activities were a major part of the diversified livelihood portfolio of coastal communities. Value chain analyses mapped marine products and identified the importance of seafood for food security of Pantar Island and income, how local communities are part of international market networks and ways to enhance the participation of local communities in the market. The research found that an MPA would potentially have negative short and long term impacts on coastal livelihoods which included changes to the level of coastal use, displacement of people from fishing areas, loss of access and rights to resources, and reduction in household income. Opportunities for strengthening livelihoods were identified. The research demonstrates the need for future MPA initiatives in Indonesia to improve the balance between conservation goals and livelihood outcomes.

Thesis Title: Reproducing Political Islam in Java: The Role of Nahdlatul Ulama and Muhammadiyah Pesantren in the Political Socialisation of the Umat

This thesis concerns pesantren (Islamic boarding schools) in Lamongan, East Java, affiliated with Indonesia’s largest Muslim organisations, the traditionalist Nahdlatul Ulama (NU) and reformist Muhammadiyah. Using Bourdieu’s concepts, including habitus, symbolic capital, and others, it examines political Islam and explains how the pesantren system reproduces Islamic identity and political culture of the umat (religious community). The NU pesantren in this study, Sunan Drajat, educates its students to be obedient; its leader demands the community faithful follow his political guidance and defend traditionalism. Conversely, the Muhammadiyah pesantren, Karangasem, teaches individual autonomy and critical thinking, but its educators urge support for politicians who promote Islamic reform. The thesis argues that although the Islamisation of Indonesian society continues and Islamic identity remains salient, Muslims are not subservient to the political instructions of pesantren leaders.

Thesis Title: The Psychosocial Correlates of Posttraumatic Stress Disorder

This research extends existing and contributes new knowledge to current understandings of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD). It comprises three studies and employed three cross-sectional samples of Australian residents who experienced trauma events. The first consists of victims, the second individuals intervening to help others, and the third, individuals who as employees, intervened to aid others. Overall results supported the two primary hypotheses guiding this research. The first predicted that individuals’ peritraumatic experience, posttraumatic responses, and endorsement of PTSD symptoms would vary according to the type of involvement in trauma. Indeed, the three samples evidenced unique responses and symptom severity. The second suggested that adult attachment style, as applied as a theory of individual difference, would mediate peritraumatic experience, posttraumatic responses, and PTSD symptom expression. Analyses revealed attachment theory proved to be an exceptional theory of individual differences for understanding the underlying mechanisms associated with symptoms of PTSD.

Thesis Title: The Role of Forest-related Income in Rural Livelihoods: The Case of Bamboo in Guangxi, China

Poor understanding of household-level forest-livelihoods is a barrier to incorporating forestry into China’s rural development strategy. In this study, the role of forest-related income in rural livelihoods was investigated in Guangxi, with specific focus on links between bamboo management practices, productivity, and livelihoods. Socioeconomic data were collected from 240 households, along with bamboo management and biophysical data. Analyses revealed forest income contributed ~31.5% to household income, predominantly from bamboo shoots. Forest income was important across income levels, although lower income households were more dependent. Inadequate bamboo management practices limited productivity and associated income. When off-farm income opportunities are limited, enhancing on-farm income sources—e.g. by increasing productivity—could improve livelihoods, but should be part of a holistic approach. More empirical household-level livelihoods analyses are needed to provide a better evidence-base to improve policy and practice for rural development in China, so that benefits reach those who need them most.

Thesis Title: The Economic Benefits from Asian Trade to the Australian Economy

This research study was conducted in order to examine whether Asian trade benefits the Australian economy. The research focused on three broad areas. Firstly, to examine the significance of the influence of Australia’s merchandise exports to Asia in relation to Australia’s total merchandise exports. Secondly, to examine the significance of the influence of Australia’s merchandise exports to Asia in relation to the Australian gross domestic product. Thirdly, to examine whether there was any impact on Australian employment rates as a result of trading with Asia. Quantitative data for the period 1992 to 2011 sourced from the Australian Bureau of Statistics was analysed and tested against the hypotheses using an appropriate statistical model. The statistical test results revealed that the Australian merchandise exports to Asia had a significant impact on Australian merchandise exports during the period 1992 to 2011.

Thesis Title: Characterisation of a Novel Staphylococcus aureus Lineage: Clonal Complex 75 (CC75), Staphylococcus argenteus

Staphylococcus aureus is a major opportunistic human pathogen, which can cause a broad spectrum of hospital- and community-acquired infections. First reported in Australia in 2004, Clonal Complex 75 (CC75), defined by MLST, is highly divergent from S. aureus. This thesis investigated the taxonomic status of CC75. The phenotypic characteristic lacking staphyloxanthin, and the genomic MLST and MLSA data, support CC75 to be a different species from S. aureus. The effectiveness and limitations of HRM analysis was assessed to identify new CC75 sequence variants on full-length MLST fragments. This thesis provided the foundation for future studies to investigate the mechanism for the lack of Tm reproducibility in the loci with poor allele discrimination. This thesis also showed for the first time a direct comparison between the non-saturating SYBR Green and saturating LCGreen+ dyes using HRM for the discrimination of sequence variants on full-length MLST fragments. In the presence of LCGreen+ at low MgCl2 concentration, HRM is confounded by an inverse correlation between DNA concentration and Tm. This effect is eliminated when MgCl2 concentration is increased to 6mM.

Thesis Title: Motion-Energy-Based Unequal Error Protection of H.264/AVC Video Bitstreams

H.264 Advanced Video Coding (AVC) is introduced as an efficient compression standard, which is applied in video communication systems. As human eyes are very sensitive to the motion activities, an error occurring in the motion region significantly degrades the video performance. In recently proposed techniques, the motion activity of frames has been evaluated by the pixel luminance difference between consecutive frames, which generates a high computational complexity. This thesis proposes a new concept to evaluate the motion activity, which is called motion energy. It is related to the distance of the block moved between consecutive frames and its size. Thesis also presents new multi-level error protection techniques for the video bitstream formatted by the Group of Pictures (GOP). The proposed techniques improve the video performance, while maintaining the same overhead existing in other conventional error protection techniques.

Thesis Title: The Epidemiology and Molecular Characterization of Burkholderia pseudomallei in Malaysian Borneo

Melioidosis is a potentially fatal disease caused by Burkholderia pseudomallei which is endemic within the tropical belt of Asia-Pacific including Malaysian Borneo. This thesis describes both clinical and epidemiological aspects of melioidosis in Malaysian Borneo. Findings of this thesis confirm that B. pseudomallei strains from that region are genetically linked to B. pseudomallei elsewhere in Malaysia and to the broader Southeast Asian grouping of isolates. In addition, this thesis describes a dominant clone of B. pseudomallei in Sarawak that is gentamicin sensitive and determines the specific genetic mutation resulting in this rare occurrence. This thesis also shows that one of the major automated systems for bacterial identification incorrectly speciates some of the B. pseudomallei strains from Borneo and determined the biochemical basis of this concerning finding. Findings from this thesis have a huge impact on laboratory diagnostic methods and on knowledge of the biogeography of B. pseudomallei in endemic regions.

Thesis Title: Learning as Transformation and Empowerment: The Case of African-Australian Women in the Northern Territory of Australia

This thesis explores the role and impact of adult education in the settlement and integration process of African-Australian women in the Northern Territory. By examining the types of formal, non-formal and informal learning that African migrant and refugee women experience, the settlement odyssey of twenty-four African migrant and refugee women are presented in this study as a journey of learning, transformation, empowerment and social action. The study informs adult education and social action theories of transformative learning, teaching and self and collective empowerment. The study makes a number of significant contributions including the provision of empirical data of African migrant and refugee women’s settlement and educational experiences in the Northern Territory. It also contributes to the debate and discourse on immigration, feminism and most importantly adult education and learning in cross-cultural contexts. The participants’ stories attest to transformation, empowerment and hope through adult education which can inform opportunities and educational pathways offered to other migrant and refugee groups in Australia and elsewhere.

Thesis Title: Portraits of Place: A Plein Air Painter in Arrernte Country, Central Australia

Plein air painting practice is used here to explore encounters with Eastern Arrernte country, Central Australia, which bears the legacy of violent colonial practices. Techniques, materials, and strategies from the European landscape painting tradition are tested and extended, to give an account of place that is problematised, inquiring, and aligned with post-colonial thought. A practice-based research methodology is informed by Indigenous research approaches and Arrernte protocols. The thesis comprises two exhibitions of paintings and an exegesis that contextualizes them, describing the experience of painting in country through five metaphors: thirst, beauty, haunting, portraits, and lost landscapes. The study concludes that plein air painting offers a model for encountering place that is non-violent, respectful, and may restore suppressed narratives of place. Painting can indeed facilitate the quest for ethical relationships with country, and play a role in caring for country.

Thesis Title: Analysis of Cogging Torque due to Manufacturing Variations in Fractional Pitch Permanent Magnet Synchronous Machines

This thesis presents a method of identifying sources of manufacturing induced cogging torque in fractional pitch permanent magnet motors. Decoupling of cogging caused by stator and rotor manufacturing variation is possible due to the independence of affected harmonics. Static angular misalignment can be identified by the presence of first order sidebands about the pole harmonics while dynamic angular misalignment has the same effect about the slot harmonics. Static eccentricity induces both first and second order sidebands about the pole harmonics while dynamic eccentricity has the same effect about the slot harmonics. A ‘Fault Diagnosis Flow Chart’ identifies the manufacturing sources of additional harmonics. For the production motors experimentally tested, stator slot variation and pole misplacement were found to be the largest contributors to unexpected cogging torque.

Thesis Title: Mathematics and Indigenous Pre-schoolers: Connecting home-community practices with mainstream curriculum

Home-community and Kindergarten practices of Indigenous children, their families and staff were investigated through ethnography and action research. The aim was to strengthen home-kindergarten continuity of learning, mathematics, language and cultural and social practices to bridge gaps and embed, not tokenise, culture at kindergarten. Home and Kindergarten Resources were developed through a child-family-staff collaborative resource development process as a way to enrich mathematical learning, build continuity, promote Indigenous voice, utilise their way and centrally place families and culture in learning and curriculum. This process transformed four key early childhood learning constructs—family involvement, cultural inclusion, prior knowledge building and curriculum flexibility—from in-theory to in-practice. This transformation enabled individualised and localised curriculum where non-physical artefacts, daily lived experiences and everyday language provided learning continuity and familiarity. Embedding culture at kindergarten requires teachers’ recognition of relationships and families as home-cultural experts.
