Introduction

Partnering between organizations:

- Not a new phenomenon
- Unique partnering led to unique participation
- A story of Indigenous organisations partnering with the state in the 1990s
- Participation as situated and generative

Learning from partnering and participating in Galiwin'ku...

- It is common for partnerships to produce relationships and effects in multiple directions
- And to be accountable to enhancing networks of kinship and elder authority, as well as enhancing organisational capacity through collaboration
- Learning how to become competent participants in these multiple landscapes is a skill we hope students might cultivate
- Supporting the learning of these students enhances the research and institutional capacity of the university as a whole

Partnering with migrant special interest organisations

- Working with migrant special interest organisations
- Generate knowers about situations and needs of the migrant organisations and the migrants approached through their work.
- Enacting a support network for migrant organisations

Partnering with parliamentarians

- Addressing issues of migrant organisations to relevant political leaders
- Translating their situations and needs into policy briefings
- Asking for invitations for future meetings

Partnering with me as a researcher

Initiating:

- Writing articles
- Contributing to applying for grants
- Doing interviews with parliamentarians
- Evaluating the work of the organisation
- Building an infrastructure for migrant organisations

Learning from partnering and participating with German migrant organisations...

- Working with New German Organisations, I hope to learn about their different partnerings and their effects
- Hoping students become fluent in engaging effectively in multiple partnerings and participations
- If students learn how to do partnering with organizations they can support and enhance their practice e.g. through their participating in papers, grants, evaluations, etc.

A shared vision....

RUHR
BOCHUM

- Differences in partnering is a phenomenon which organisations encounter daily, and which is at issue in their practice
- CDU and RUB – both want to enhance their capacity in and through partnering

Towards a participation enhancing agreement between our Universities

- Evading a notion of student exchange as promoting cultural tourism...
- Students as 'becoming multiply competent participants'
- Produces value within our respective Institutions

Thank you!
